Assumptions of consensual communication between pupil in puberty and his teacher

ABSTRACT:

Communication between the pupil in the period of adolescence and his teacher is mainly influenced by pupil's fase of development and specific features of school environment. The assumption of consensual communication is to know these types of influence and to choose our modes of behaviour accordingly. Interviews with adolescent pupil's proofed the theory mainly that the pupil's need rules and boundaries which the adults should observe consistently and they should let step by step the adolescents make the decisions and allow them to be independent.
